

Dr Dale Gardiner, National Clinical Lead for Organ Donation, NHSBT and Adult Intensive Care Medicine Consultant, Nottingham University Hospitals

Dr Gardiner is a Consultant in Adult Intensive Care Medicine at Nottingham University Hospitals NHS Trust, UK.

Through an interest in ethics, the diagnosis of death and deceased organ donation he accepted the role as local hospital Clinical Lead for Organ Donation in Nottingham in 2009 and Regional Clinical Lead for Organ Donation in the Midlands in 2011. In June 2013 he gave up the local and regional roles to become the UK Deputy National Clinical Lead for Organ Donation for NHS Blood and Transplant and in June 2018 he was appointed into the national role after the retirement of Dr Paul Murphy.

Dr Gardiner is co-chair of the deceased donation working group for ELPAT (Ethical, Legal and Psychosocial Aspects of organ Transplantation as part of the European Society for Organ Transplantation) and chair of the Nottingham University Hospital's Ethics of Clinical Practice Committee. He served for four years as a member of the UK Donation Ethics Committee until its closure in 2016.
